Important Information

This risk/reward chart is not intended to serve as investment advice; but rather is a representation of how Weiss Capital Management believes its core and specialty investment programs should be ranked by market risk relative to one another — that is, how sensitive the programs are expected to be to changes in general market conditions. For example, market risk is higher for programs invested outside the United States or that invest in commodity-based securities. Long-term investing, as well as allocating assets among various asset categories, may help reduce the effects of market risk and improve overall returns. There can be no guarantee that any one of these programs will experience less volatility than any other or achieve a specific rate of return. Each program has its own investment risks and you should read its specific marketing materials, as well as the Firm's ADV Part II before investing.
